LAP Lambert Academic Publishing Aug 2013, 2013. Taschenbuch. Book Condition: Neu. 220x150x8 mm. Neuware - The research work presented is about small electronically-commutated axial-flux permanent-magnet (AFPM) machines having the double-sided topology of an inner rotor with surface-mounted Nd-Fe-B magnets, sandwiched between two outer slotted stators with distributed three-phase windings. After reviewing the small double-sided AFPM machine candidate topologies for low-speed direct-drive applications, the book hinges on the size equations and the analytical electromagnetic design of the inner-rotor AFPM (AFIPM) machine topology under study. Original methods of modelling and design optimization of a small prototype AFIPM machine are then proposed with the view to reducing the airgap flux density space-harmonics and the torque ripple by rotor-PM shape modification. Extensive experimental tests are carried out on the small three-phase AFIPM machine prototype in order to validate its proper design and to check its electronic commutation and basic control technique. 132 pp. Englisch.
