Something Missing: A Novel

By Dicks, Matthew

Broadway Books, 2009. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: "Who wants to catch a thief when he's as endearing as Martin Railsback, the oddball hero of Matthew Dicks's first novel, SOMETHING MISSING? Martin is, after all, prone to rob people of items they'll never miss (a bar of soap, a few sticks of butter, the odd diamond) as a way of getting to know them. Despite his obsessive-compulsive work ethic, Martin manages to get himself in trouble over a toothbrush--but not before we've decided to let him in next time he calls"-- New York Times Book Review "Mark Haddon's The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time (2003) is about a young, autistic amateur sleuth. Monk is a popular television series about a detective with an obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD). This debut novel introduces us to a character who appears to have elements of autism and OCD, but here's the twist: he's a professional criminal. Martin Railsback is a housebreaker with a short list of "clients" from whom he's been "acquiring" things for years. He makes regular visits to their homes, cataloging their possessions, tracking their purchases, learning their lives. Most of his...
