Excerpt: .and as to the kinds they have seen, and allow different pupils to draw upon the board examples of the various crosses mentioned. The Greek, Maltese, and St. Andrew s crosses are examples of what are called square figures, as being generally square, their four sides being alike. This figure may be given to pupils to study and draw by themselves if they have had the primary training. This will lead to independent work. If they have not had previous training, the suggestions below will be of use. To be developed.--Cross, Greek, Latin; general shape, square, oblong; drawing the cross; quality of line. Study of the Paper Cross.--What is the model? The model is a cross.) Can you draw at the board a different cross, and tell how it differs? (The first is alike on all four sides; the second is like the first at the top, at the left, and at the right, but it is longer at the bottom) What can you say of the arms of the first cross? They are all equal.) What is the name of this cross? (// is a Greek cross.) What is the second cross? It is a Latin cross.) What can you say about its arms? It has the three upper arms equal, and the fourth, the shaft, longer than the other three.) Compare the width of this Greek cross with its height; how do they compare? They are equal?) Can you mention any figures...
