Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Experimental Studies in Judgment, Vol. 22 A General title, such as that given to this monograph, can give very little preliminary indication of the nature of the problems therein suggested or investigated. In the study of those mental processes, acts or resultants which we vaguely call judgments there are perhaps four chief problems with which special researches may be concerned: (a) The nature and mechanism of judgments. Studies which have sought for introspective ear-marks or criteria of the judgment process, - qualitative differentia between judgments and other elementary or complex states or processes or acts, belong here. Here also would belong any attempt to describe or hypothecate the physiological correlate of judgments. With these problems the studies here presented are not concerned. (b) The forms, varieties and classification of judgments. This may be conceived as a task for logical rather than for psychological inquiry. It may suffice here merely to indicate that these studies are in no primary way concerned with problems of classification. (c) The basis or perceptual criteria of typical judgments, the data which determine the content, direction, or outcome of special varieties of judgments under given conditions. Two of the studies here presented are specifically directed toward this type of problem. Thus in Chapter II, and in Chapter IX. attempts are made to discover on what data one relies when he judges the efficiency of a work process or the extent or duration of a voluntary movement. (d) The laws or behavior of judgments, and the ways in which the laws are modified or the behavior conditioned by specific variations of the judgment situation. Among these specific variations of the judgment situation...
