

Fire (Paperback)

By Trina Chako

Createspace, United States, 2014. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Fire is the story of Raghuvir Bhardwaj, a sixteen year old refugee who comes to Delhi after the partition from Lahore. Fire traces his journey from the crowded refugee camp, through the rented house in Daryaganj to his emergence in society as a powerful business magnate. It tells the tale of his passionate love for Radhika, the only daughter of Barrister Sharma, his friendships with two very different boys- Maninder and Ratan Patel(scion of Ralhan Patel) and his transformation from a shy gauche introvert to a man driven by pain and hate. Raghuvir, or Raghu as he is called, comes to India with nothing more than a bundle of clothes and memories of a happy childhood among his Muslim friends. But here he finds out the truth- about his mother, about their status as refugees. The truth is a bitter pill to swallow. He witnesses his father, a school teacher being humiliated. Worse he sees his father accepting that humiliation. Angered he decides to finance his own college education. With his friend s Ratan s help...
